

Juris Doctor

The Loyola University New Orleans College of Law is a bridge.

A bridge between those committed to justice and the communities that need them. Between a group of strong, dedicated men and women and the experts who can shape them into lawyers. Between a world that's ready for change and the ones who are going to change it. Whether our students use their law degrees to create new companies or access public benefits for low-income clients, the Loyola University New Orleans College of Law prepares students to practice law with excellence anywhere in the world.

Full-time students

The full-time day program has two curricular tracks:

- Civil law, geared for students who will practice in Louisiana or other civil law or mixed tradition jurisdictions.
- Common law, geared for students who are likely to practice in other states or other common law jurisdictions.